Subject: FW: Supreme Court Decision and DACA Initial Filings

Good morning Sharon,

NSC has raised question below regarding DACA filings that come into their Filing and Validity Date Review work queue. Cases fall into this queue when the filing does not show any prior DACA grant. Since USCIS is not accepting new initial filings from individuals who have never before been granted DACA, a NOID is issued for such cases and then denied accordingly. In the particular example IOE [REDACTED], this requestor was issued a NOID (see attached). It appears she had a different form of deferred action and so this case would normally be denied. However, due to the recent Supreme Court Decision,

Thank you.

IOEO [REDACTED]

I know details are still being worked out but wanted to make you aware that we currently have cases that may be affected from the Filing and Validity Date Review work queue.

Thank you,
Jenni
